

Crazy you say! Who, what, why I ask my self? Big Money I guess.

Please this really is the craziest thing I have ever read. I will try to explain why I feel this way. I use the highway for about 50% of my working day. I can say I have had aggressive Truck drivers, run me off the road, hang me the finger for driving the speed limit, and many near accidents. So far I have been able to avoid any accidents by driving on the defense. The plan rule is the Tonnage Rules the Highway. If guessing I would say most of these guilty drivers are in the age group of 21-33.

We all have watched Smokey and the Bandit and I can understand that truck drivers really do have a long way to go and a short time to get there. I work for a large corporation and have worked for many small ones too. Once again I understand that the employers are really concerned about the bottom line. Put a young person with out the experience to draw the line between Bottom line and Law. Now You!

Have just created a new Recipe for Disaster!!! Remember we all use the highway and the next ingredient for your new recipe just might be you or someone from your family. Please don't pass this into law. To many peoples lives are at stake due to inexperience and maturity that includes the new young 18 drivers you just put on the road. The growing pains with this one will be great.

Thank you
