Dear Sirs;

I understand that the DOT is giving some consideration to installing a nationwide program to train, or re-trian, truck drivers. I am not in favor of this move.

This just another example of the "Big Government" getting involved in private industry. I think the "uniform commercial drivers licence" is a good idea, but putting a training program in place would not serve the public or the industry well nor would it effectivly improve highway safety. Therefore a government mandated drivers training program should be avoided. To add to this: I think that, because of the investment in equipment involved, the industry will police itself in this matter.

Very truly yours

Ernest G. Todd
