Dear Sirs:

I am writing in regards to the legislation on the Adequacy of Training for CDL Drivers.

I believe the adequacy of training shows through in the testing. The purpose of a test is to see if the training is working, and no further monitoring of the training procedure is needed.

Training for the CDL of bus drivers is also reflected by our insurance rates. Our premiums are kept low by employing highly trained drivers.

Training of our drivers is a foremost priority for us, and the process of CDL training/testing (written and hands-on) substantially reflects the quality of school bus driver training techniques.

Sincerely,

Scott Grosskopf
