

The US needs to treat rail as an equal partner in transportation solutions, and not just as a "bastard step-child". All forms of public transport are subsidized, and rail has traditionally not been given a fair share - in fact, it has not been given enough to survive. This should be rectified.