

As roadways reach capacity, inability of humans to act in concert in response to traffic signal phases becomes the bottleneck. More automated driving is really required to yield high throughput at low sustained speeds, which will be efficient yet safe.