How will such a rule help increaee security? This is a rule is a "knee-jerk" reaction to the media. It is a rule for the sake of having more rules. In this country, it does not take a lot of effort to acquire an illegitimate identification. A photographic identification with a name that matches a name on a pilot certificate does not prove anything about the bearer.

It is virtually impossible for any government body to prevent acts of terrorism. It is up to the citizenry to be ever more vigilant: to know who is out of place; to know who belongs where; to aek questions when in doubt and to notify authorities when something appears amiss. Ultimately, we are responsible for our own security. Police forces do not prevent crime!

Rules are established to formalize operating procedures among free citizens who respect each other. Since terrorists have no respect for anyone, is it conceivable that they would follow this rule?

Respectfully,
