

Ipswich, MA has 5 rail-crossings within a one-mile stretch, all of which is residential. To have a locomotive (26 each day) blow the wistle at each crossing would mean a constant wistle through the entire area from the hours of 5 am through midnight. At 110dB-plus volume, this will certainly destroy our quality of life. Because of a few individuals who are foolish enough to think they can beat a train at a crossing, or do not look before they cross, the rest of us must suffer for this very small minority. I strongly urge you to take the rest of us into consideration before you make such a drastic decision.
