

To force the blowing of train whistles is so idiotic, that there must be ulterior motives for pushing this. Living in such a sophisticated society we know it's a matter of money and who is going to pay! Nobody should have to put up with the suffering of noise pollution. If a private company created so much noise they would be sued out of business or forced to shut down. When the military has people lose hearing because of noise pollution they pay. The railroad should be made to conform to the rules like any other private individual or company has to conform to. We the people, are the government, let the local governments control what they can afford to control. If the federal government forces absurd regulations on all let the federal government pay.(and damn those politicians that have no idea what the people want)
