

Please do not require testers to take new preliminary steps to require drivers to empty pockets and take off shoes and then inspect the shoes. I feel that this would not change anything. Those who are deceptive will know these procedures and deceive in other ways. Many drivers will be needlessly embarrassed because of hygiene and/or embarrassing contents of their pockets. I think the procedures, as they are now, are effective. More stringent requirements should be reserved for those being retested because of positive results, reasonable suspicion or have been in an accident.

Thank you for your consideration!
