

I would like to submit an opinion regarding rear hand brakes on motorscooters. The U.S. is suffering from a gasoline crisis (once again). Encouragement of alternative forms of transportation should be priority. One of those forms is a motorcycle or motorscooter. The selection of motorscooters in this country is so anemic due to the regulation of the "rear hand brake" that so many other countries produce their motorscooters with. I ask that you repeal this regulation to bring a wider selection of these motor driven vehicles to help encourage people to use this form of transportation. More scooters means less car and SUV traffic means less to have to spend on new roads, etc. etc.
