

I have lived and worked in Mercer County since 1982. Since I work at a power plant, I have always gone by central time and we have been able to work around the different time zones. I will continue to have my clocks set on central time no matter what decision the DOT renders in this case. However, I think a change to central time would be a step in the right direction and would eliminate a lot of confusion created by trying to work around two different time zones. Many business people from out of state that make visits to the plants are very bewildered by the fact that they are on central time at the plant site and as soon as they leave and go to town for lunch they have entered a mountain time zone. It requires a certain amount of explanation to make them understand the fact that we really are in a mountain time zone, operating many businesses on central time, in order to be in sync with our headquarters' offices.