

If teen age drivers are so reliable, then why do the insurance companies charge them such a high rate until age 25? It's bad enough that the trucking industry wants to put triple trailers on the road, but to have an 18 year old driving something like that would make me want to turn in my driver's license. You are out of your minds.