

Tire pressure monitors as mandatory is not a good idea. It would be one more piece of expensive, technical equipment that can go wrong, making repairs expensive. It is massive emotional response to a small problem. The government needs to quit treating us as though we are less intelligent than a small child.