

In response to your request for citizen input, I would agree wholeheartedly that some of the newer kinds of headlights are dangerous. I have been temporarily blinded many times and as a result I was unable to see the road ahead of me when approaching vehicles with the headlights described in the request for information. Anecdotally, it seems to be worse in rural areas, where ambient light is lower. Particularly on winding roads, this is frightening and hazardous.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Jennifer DiSabatino