

I agree with the comments that the newer vehicle headlights produce an inordinate amount of glare. Many times while driving at night I have been forced to angle my rear and/or side mirror(s) so I would not be "blinded" from seeing the road ahead. In addition, oncoming cars with these types of headlights also produce blinding effects.

I believe this is a potentially dangerous situation.

Thank you for the chance to comment.

Ray Chevalier