

I am an F.A.A.-licensed aircraft dispatcher and I highly encourage the F.A.A to do the right thing and require that Fractional Ownership Operators utilize Aircraft Dispatchers. Fractional ownership outfits are essentially airlines. Therefore, they must not be allowed to duck the stringent operational control and safety rules by which airlines abide. After all, if a CEO rides in a fractionally owned jet, is their life worth less than when they fly an airline? A single level of safety must apply to all.

Kpakpo Acquaye