

To the question of aircraft crew carrying weapons: It should be an available option provided the person is required to take and pass a weapons carrying and handling certification process. This process should be similar to the Conceal and Carry process that some states (Virginia) has in place today.

As to the weapon type and ammunition: The weapons typically carried as Conceal and Carry weapons are adequate for the task and the ammunition should be selected to greatly reduce the chances of hull penetration and collateral injuries.