

In regards to this proposed extension of the current TFR, which already has 3 airports entrapped, I think it is a really bad idea. As others have said, which I firmly believe, General Aviation was not responsible for 9-11, so why is it we are being punished? We are not able to go over Washington and gigantic airliners are? Doesn't seem like it makes too much sense. General Aviation is not the problem, however, I am positive that if the TFR is significantly reduced, and we are able to go in and out of the airports currently in the TFR, there would still be security around important buildings, etc., and pilots would be happy as we can have a sense of normalcy and room to move.
