

I believe that applying the reduced vertical separation minimum criteria in domestic airspace is sorely needed to expand the airspace capacity and reduce delays for commercial service carriers. Given that this standard has already been demonstrated to be safe in other areas, maximum effort should be made to implement it in the Domestic United States as rapidly as possible.