Subject Docket Number FAA-2002-13464-2 - 35

I agree with the proposed docket. The safety of passengers and their ability to survive in an impact survivable accident is very important. Many people are afraid of flying in an airplanes anyway, so with the idea in mind that someone wants to come up with different strategies of improving safety while flying is great. This may allow individuals to feel secure while inflight. Some ways of improvement maybe seatbelt security, less seats, so that weight wont be a problem, or even the closeness of the seating arrangement. The way the seats are installed may also be a factor.
