

I'm very concerned that this rule does not allow for any appeal or oversight process. Terrorists or enemies of the state will not care if they have a license or not, any more than a bank robber will obey a speed limit when fleeing the scene of the crime. This rule appears to offer a tremendous opportunity for error on the part of well-intentioned officials, without any oversight or accountability to balance that.