

I find it disturbing that the TSA will be able to, in effect, pull my pilot certificate without providing any real justification for doing so. To state that an individual is a security threat while providing no other information and no recourse strikes me as something more befitting a regime found in Iraq or North Korea.