

The FAA is required by law to help aviation prosper in this country. If this NPRM becomes law, the government will have failed in it's duty to the small operators who will, by the FAA's own admission, be put out of business. When I was employed as a CFI, I flew countless sightseeing flights and counted on these flights to help build my time and paycheck. There is no justification for this NPRM, just as there is no justification for our government to run hundreds of honest operators out of business.
