

Requiring new rules governing the use of simulators by flight schools and others will result in most flight schools simply doing away with many of their advanced programs. This will result in the loss of jobs, along with decreased flight proficiency.

The proper action is to leave things alone!