

to whom it may concern:

for the sake of brevity.....this is another example of the government fixing something that is not broken and putting thousands of people out of business in the process (sightseeing rule changes). along with preventing thousands of others from helping others (charity flights).

seems like it should be the other way around. i.e. encourage business, help others. but i guess that is asking too much from a government that we serve. they certainly do not serve us, at the least, they do a very poor job of it. thank you.
