

i am all in favor of improving reflectivity. penalties should be issued to any community's road departments that do not protect, maintain road signs. I know in north jersey this is a real problem. Road depts in my own town do not bother to cut the grassvines back from covering road signs, they do not bother to install signs according to traffic regulations, and our countystate are no better. I think the public needs stiff financial penalties that can be issued against road departments that do not observe the law on posting traffic signs. On having signst that are readable and not faded, etc.
