

This is a three part comment from a concerned airline Aircraft Dispatcher that would prefer that we first consider multiple alternatives, simulate those alternatives with available tools, and then select the alternative that meets the demands of the traveling public balanced with the intention of reducing delays. We cannot continue to just change the names of the carriers that offer additional capacity to a saturated environment.