

My comment on this will be directed to the fact that this particular model Honda is trying to introduce into the states is indeed a motorscooter/motorcycle and in such will be a hybrid of sorts, therefore why should a certain standard be set to not allow this machine to be sold. It is the consumers discretion to buy this unit or not depending on what and where items are located, therefore it should be up to the consumer on how it is operated, and for this particular model it is easier for anyone to operate it with the brake located on the handlebars. In closing I would like to comment that if it werent for like minded individuals creating and improvising on everything we know, our society would never grow.
