

what is being collected by the coast guard right now on passage of oil laden ships through our environment is not adequate. just off the coast of nj recently a vast oil slick turned up polluting many many new jersey beaches. nobody knows who did it.

it is time that the coast guard keep satellite records of our coastline and get notified every time an oil bearing ship of any kind enters our waters. any foreign ship that enters u.s. waters should have to notify the coast guard before it enters. whatever is being done right now is not adequate to protect america, in these terrorist times. i do not think this information collection is adequate at all.
