

This rule will create an unnecessary economical burden to all flight schools and instructors. It has been proven many times that a small aircraft will produce no more damage than the average 4-door sedan. Implementing this rule on US citizens who own and fly small aircraft is about as necessary as implementing the same rule on automobile owners. The point is all it will really do is add cost, and in the long run, do nothing but harm the US transportation system.